What happens when Santa doesn't have the right gifts? But knows someone who does? Several snow-children write letters telling Santa what they want. But Snow-bully and Snow-bella ask Santa for gifts like courage, compassion and self-control. Santa realizes he only has toys, but not the gifts children really need. Santa goes to church to pray for help and writes a letter to God asking for the gifts he doesn't make. Families may think they know what their kids want for Christmas—but after they read this book together, they will discover the difference between what they want and what they need. Readers will also learn who Santa gets his gifts from! Santa and the Sad Snowman is part of a unique collection of books from AuntyT's Storytelling Inspiration for Illustration®. Considered the real Christmas coloring book, this is the one gift that reveals the most precious gifts; illustration prompts and writing prompts to stimulate interesting and insightful conversations. Perfect for Holiday parties, Sunday School, Children's ministries, or traveling for the Holidays, this book encourages thought provoking creativity, and problem solving. When Santa doesn't have the gifts children need, he goes right to the source of all God's gifts and turns to Jesus for help! Remember, the most important part of Christmas is about the gifts God gives! Merry Christmas!
